

Forecast For Yorkshire & the Humber
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Wednesday 24 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Brightening up today with plenty of sunshine.

Today:

A cloudy start this morning, especially across southern parts where it may be damp and drizzly. However, becoming dry and bright for all with plenty of sunshine through the day. Feeling mild in the sunshine, despite being a little breezy. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Tonight:

Lengthy clear spells at first but clouding over for many overnight. Some light rain is possible over the Pennines but this will ease later, and most will stay dry. Chilly. Minimum temperature 4 deg C (39 deg F).

Thursday:

Dry for many with variable amounts of cloud giving some bright or sunny spells. Perhaps cloudier later, with some rain and drizzle likely over the Pennines. Breezy and mild. Maximum temperature 14 deg C (57 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:

Early rain on Friday clearing to leave a cold day with blustery showers, wintry on hills. Drier and brighter on Saturday, then rain overnight slowly easing Sunday. Windy throughout.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.